

Mark Horowitz (Golden Slate Recipient) Bio

NCIS Executive Producer, Mark Horowitz, was inspired by both his father's and grandfather's love of working in the Hollywood television industry. As a young man, once he decided to pursue his own career in filmmaking, he progressed from Super 8 comedies and rock videos to educational documentaries. In 1975, Mark started working in the Film Editorial Department at Universal Studios, and in 1980, became the Associate Producer on a television movie called "Off the Minnesota Strip." Since that time, Mark has worked as the producer and/or director of over 600 episodes of television, including Doogie Howser, M.D., The Rockford Files movies for television, JAG, and of course NCIS (which he has executive produced for the past 15 years). He is married to sculptor Monica Wyatt and lives in Los Angeles with their two teenage children, Lucas and Lauren.
